This book began when I received a message on a morning walk from my spirit guide: "We are going to write a book together," he said. I had been receiving messages for years, but nothing like this. The book, I was told, was to be about color and "the power that is in color that so many, including yourself, do not yet fully comprehend."

About 15 years in the making, the book's story is told with my personal watercolor mandalas combined with channeled messages from my spirit guides. All in color, it is enhanced with many vignette details of the mandalas. The book started as an adventure of opening to the power of color, flowers and spiritual guidance at a deeper level than I had done before. This turned into an unexpected and unplanned awakening to my spiritual and creative calling. The book then became an encouragement for others to open to their own personal spiritual calling.
