At work, you can run through your "to do" list efficiently; at home, you struggle to find the time to make the grocery list.  Turn perennial household issues, such as chores and mealtimes, into manageable projects that the whole family can work on

 Use quizzes, self-tests, and worksheets to set realistic priorities and goals for each family member

 Extend your professional time-management skills to after-school activities and family trips

 Develop a flexible budget that will both meet your daily needs and allow you to fund special projects, such as preparing for the holidays and saving for college
